Rajiv Tsigankovich, who heads up the FIFA Division’s HyperMotion Technology Group, explains Fifa 22 Product Key’s use of HyperMotion and the advancements it brings to the game. “The new technology in FIFA 22 is called HyperMotion, and it’s already getting great response from players,” says Rajiv. “The main features of HyperMotion are: Real Player Interactions - Compared to FIFA 21, simulations of real player interactions are more authentic and less predictable. Players will start to use the ball as per their real-life tendencies. Tactile Sensations - This includes different textures and more accurate player reactions to the ball, the contact surface, the ground, etc. This also leads to better player anticipation. Read, React & Cope - The new system allows more fluid player responses to the ball during in-game situations, where key decisions need to be taken immediately. These include last-ditch tackles, successful dribbles, perfectly timed through balls etc.” As the future of FIFA on PlayStation is set out in the game’s roadmap, Rajiv explains the many features that will be included in FIFA 22 on PlayStation. What’s new with FIFA on PlayStation? “The roadmap for FIFA on PlayStation will, like with every version of FIFA, introduce new features and content to expand the FIFA World Cup experience, while maintaining that game-play authenticity and flair that makes FIFA the brand it is. “HyperMotion and HyperSmoothing have been hugely successful on Xbox One and PC. The numbers show that, with HyperMotion, players actually run and move more naturally and naturally get themselves into the right position for key actions such as one-versus-ones, free kicks, shots, passes, interceptions, crosses and dribbles. The HyperSmoothing has created an even further improvement to the running & movement experience, with players naturally darting away from tackles without the need for artificial intelligence. “FIFA on PlayStation will use HyperMotion to enhance the FIFA World Cup experience. With FIFA World Cup 20 on PlayStation, we were able to capture only the movement of the players’ heads and shoulders - which is 20 per cent of the movement available. This is clearly not enough to give players the fully authentic experience they’ve come to expect.” Being in High Definition is more than ‘just’ a visual
