Bone marrow hypoplasia is a life-threatening complication of stem cell transplantation, chemotherapy and radiation. In these settings, even minor reductions in the number of hematopoietic stem cells may be associated with significant morbidity and/or mortality. Attempts to increase the number of haematopoietic stem cells in the bone marrow may not be successful if they do not overcome the losses of stem cells and/or the damage to the marrow that occurs with cytotoxic therapy. At present, therapy is limited to supportive care and treatment of the underlying disease. This review summarizes some of the current strategies being used to increase the number of haematopoietic stem cells and to reduce the toxicity of chemotherapy and radiation. Q: What is the purpose of the GMS3 flag? To what is the GMS3 flag used on some integrations and what do you do with it? Thanks! A: If an event is GMS3 a green point is added to the google analytics report for that day. So the report looks like this: Chart1 1 + xxx.xxx usd + xxx.xxx usd In a chart view, you can configure a field to show if a value is zero or not. So one can read the report and see what the zero is. But what if you want to know if a value was 3.x times higher than the previous day? GMS3 solves that. You can see the difference between charts below and if you click on the graph it will render it to a straight text report. Chart2 1cb139a0ed
